

Abstract

A method and apparatus of driving a plasma display panel wherein an abnormal discharge generated from a non-display 5 area can be prevented to thereby improve a picture quality. In the method and apparatus, at least partial ones of electrodes at the active area and at least partial ones of dummy electrodes positioned within the non-display area are driven with an identical signal.